Performing Arts Series

Program Policies
Revised January 2015

Introduction

A little history, please, Maestro. The Performing Arts Series (PAS) began more than 50 years ago as an all-volunteer group of arts aficionados committed to bringing live performances to local audiences. Many of those arts patrons were associated with New Mexico Tech, including Jacques Renault, a chemist by vocation, and a musician and arts lover by lifetime choice. Renault died in 2003 as one of the driving forces behind the eventual success of PAS.

In those early days, PAS events were staged in an old World War II Quonset hut, better known and remembered as “The Tin Can.” That era of the late 1960’s and 1970’s is reflected in the personalities of two of its more colorful personas – Rousseau Flower, an internationally known paleontologist who regularly wore jodhpurs and a monocle. Flower also is remembered for the local newspaper reviews he wrote of PAS events, most of them fairly crackling with dry wit. Also Alan Marshall, an actor and director with New York roots who brought to Socorro and New Mexico Tech a series of plays that embraced the social and political rhetoric of the day, including several penned by a young playwright named Sam Shephard.

In time, New Mexico Tech adopted the Performing Arts Series as one of its educational and community outreach offerings; and, with the addition of the Macey Center complex in 1982, the PAS had a permanent home – and a great stage to go with it.

Today, the Performing Arts Series enjoys a reputation for the cultural diversity of its performance offerings, and for the growing popularity of outreach activities that stretch from the heart of Socorro to embrace the historical town of Magdalena to the west, and the Alamo-Navajo Reservation. PAS has grown and thrived under the capable hands of its full-time director, Ronna Kalish; and with the backing of New Mexico Tech President Dr. Daniel H. López, who has supported the Performing Arts Series during his entire tenure as Tech’s mentor. The PAS would be remiss if it did not also recognize its many supporters and subscribers within the New Mexico Tech and Socorro County communities. Que vivan los artes!
